

BRADLEY MARTIN'S WIDOW IS DEAD IN HER ENGLISH HOME

Was Once Famous in New York Society—Mother of Countess of Craven.

Word of the death in England of Mrs. Cornelia F. Martin was received last night in a cable despatch to her son, Major Bradley Martin. It contained merely the fact that she died some time yesterday in her country home at Hamstead Marshall.

Mrs. Martin was the widow of the late Bradley Martin, who moved his residence from New York to London some years ago. The Bradley Martins were famous in New York society for many years.

They figured extensively in the society news in the last years of the twentieth century, and reached the pinnacle of their social glory in the great "Bradley Martin Ball" at the Waldorf-Astoria in 1917.

The ball surpassed everything previously known in social life here. The dinner cost $110 a plate, and all the gay youth of New York shaved their mustaches to obey the edict for clean-shaven countenances. Popular interest was so great that thousands of men and women surrounded the hotel on the night of the affair.

The Bradley Martins, aside from holding a front rank in metropolitan society, also were enormously wealthy. Back in 1913, when the value of jewelry was much less than at present, it was estimated Mrs. Martin owned $500,000 worth of necklaces, tiaras and stomachers. They had a magnificent town house with beautiful gardens at No. 8 East 87th Street. This was sold in 1916 for $400,000.

It was shortly after the famous "Bradley Martin Ball" that the family moved to England to conquer the social world of another hemisphere. They were successful, entertaining royalty. Their daughter, Cornelia, was married to the Earl of Craven.

They had a town house at No. 4 Chesterfield Gardens, London, and a 65,000-acre country estate, Bismarck, in Leicestershire, in the north of England, where they gave wonderful hunting parties.

It was after the death of Mrs. Martin's father in 1891 that the Bradley Martins began their conquest of society. He was Isaac F. Sherman of Buffalo, who made a fortune in the manufacture of beer stoves. He lived quietly, invested his savings wisely, and left his daughter $400,000. Bradley Martin himself was wealthy and a member of a prominent family of Albany.

The son, Major Bradley Martin, was educated in England and spent his early years there.

Granny and the Bride Swap Stories

"When I was only about five I remember crossing the old Kissing Bridge with daddy and mother, on the way to John K. Cowperthwait's Furniture Store, in Chatham Square. In those days people had to wait until they'd saved up before they could furnish their homes. But to-day it's different."

"Yes, Granny," said the Bride. "This very day Tom and I are going to select our home-things from that very same house, now the 'Oldest Furniture House in America.' But to-day they have two enormously big stores—and they let people make small weekly or monthly payments. It's so easy—and we can enjoy all our beautiful new furniture during the long time we would otherwise have to save up for it."
